Sex Script Roblox Pastebin is a script for roguelike-like games with a surly protagonist. The protagonist must defeat the bosses of different levels, rescue girls from dungeons, and progress through the story. It's been running for over six years now on Roblox and it has an incredible following with thousands of users playing every day. As long as you're willing to play through the game again and again to get through particular parts of the stories, it's a great place to have fun without getting too frustrated by not being able to beat a boss or level.

A well-known example of a story is the one you will see when going to "The Village" in Roblox. While going up the stairs, there's a long, dark corridor. The player needs to find their way through it. After reaching the end of this corridor, they find themselves in front of a set of double doors with an ominous red wall behind them. The doors are closed and they can't do anything about it unless they go through the wall. So, they proceed through the wall and end up at an area that looks like it belongs in Middle Earth (It's an homage to Lord of the Rings). The protagonist has to press buttons that turn on the lamps on the walls to find out what lies beyond the doors. The first remark they make once they open them is "I think I was supposed to grab a sword from the table...", which leads them into another area that looks like a medieval castle. In this area, there's a girl tied up in ropes and she has been locked inside a dungeon cell. After freeing her from her bonds and bringing her out of the dungeon, they have her go back inside and take a look at where she's been kept. When she comes out of the room, there's a pool of water all around it and pieces of broken glass all over the floor. She says she doesn't know how long she was held there, but it felt like a very long time. She asks the protagonist if they remember the place from before, so they tell her that this is where they met her. After asking her who locked her inside the dungeon cell and why, she says it was actually a man who came to visit their village to sell his swords. He looked too scary for them to approach though, so they left him alone in the inn. This is when the girl confesses that she actually saw him go into one of the houses with a young lady of their village. She's sure that he tried to kill her inside because she never saw her leave with him after that day. She tells the protagonist that there were some people inside the village who weren't sure what to do because they don't know whether he's a good person or not. To her, there's no doubt in her mind that he tried to kill her. After talking with her, she runs back to the inn and the protagonist is supposed to follow her. Once they get there though, they find out that everyone in the village has been frozen in time. The girl stops in front of the innkeeper and says his name is "Matthias". After she calls his name, he says "I'm sorry I had to keep you here like this my dear." without moving any part of his body (he sounds like a zombie).
