Vray 2.0 for sketchup 2015 full version.Labor force participation in Southern China is shrinking again in the aftermath of the coronavirus, with the unemployment rate jumping to 4.1% from 1.3% at the end of February. Premier Li Keqiang, speaking on the sidelines of a G20 meeting in Hangzhou, said he was "extremely worried" about the collapse in labor force participation, which has already hit 1.8 million workers, mostly in the countryside. That's a worry because the trouble with China's economy is that a large share of the work force is stuck in the labor force, which is a drag on growth and employment. The collapse in participation is also a concern because the country is still in recovery mode, with GDP shrinking in the first quarter. A survey from the state-run Center for China and the Global Economy says that the main reason for the rapid fall is that workers fear they may contract the coronavirus. Also, workers are likely to stay at
