

---

A: ' ' is only present in windows. If you open a file in windows, there's the default newline, while in linux there's no such thing. The leading ' ' is being ignored in linux, which is why your code works fine in linux. Any of the other suggested solutions can be considered, but be sure to specify exactly what works and what doesn't in your specific scenario. Gloomy C, at, has got the right idea when it comes to the contest. All I can say is, for me personally, this is a monthly thing that I don't need to pay for, I've already paid for it in the past and it's not something that I'm going to pay for again. No refunds, no refunds. And as I look at that photo, I still think that 'NO' is the right answer. Lucky you! Even though the thumbnails are nice, I'm going to have to say no on the contest because of the cost. I already pay for the magazine, and the subscription service is more than enough for me. Not to add onto the idea of a monthly contest, but I would love to see the people who participate in the cover reveal have the option to be able to buy the book as well. Now that is going to be tough since I am only going to be getting the issue containing the cover as a digital download. You've made me think of this, Dan. While I've been a fan of a few of the books, mostly fantasy and science fiction, this is my first foray into mysteries, and I have to admit I'm impressed by the cover art. I am in agreement with Gloomy C. I hope that some of the other winners agree with me, as this is what I would choose if I had the chance to win. I wonder if I will win the contest? Woo hoo! Another winner for me, and one of my favorite books of all time! I love the cover design, and the lack of art that is featured on the book cover itself. No text, no words, just an image. I have a question or two about the contest. 1. Are the winners allowed to "buy" the book? Is that part of the prize package? I really would not want to have to pay to purchase it myself. 2. When can we expect to see the contest 2d92ce491b