This is the result of the combination of two good programming projects: - First was the soundmerge.exe utility, a free file merger. - Second was the PSCAD, a diagram editor, but the idea was good: with the right programming, anyone can create an image or sound file that will be the core of a screen saver. After a lot of work to the imagefile algorithm, we could achieve this work:
Merges all images and sounds contained in a single.txt file. How does it work? - With the help of the player-time calculation algorithm, the image is given every second, or every tenth of second, the main attention. - Each image is shown during the time it is in an active state (the animation must be in a loop or else will be no result) and is shown only with the music file, but if you want to have a screen saver with images and sound, then the image must be shown with the music file, but we've included a screen saver that has animated images. - There is a "pause" button when the program is turned on the computer. (Pause the computer sound when it is turned on) - When you turn off the computer, the screen saver automatically stops playing. Screen Saver Builder Download Screen Saver Maker merges your .jpg, .gif, .bmp images and .mp3, .wav and .mid sounds to create a compact, single file, Windows standard, screen saver! No programming skills needed: just collect images and sounds and add them to your screen saver project with a point-and-click, easy to use, interface. Full support for self-installing screen savers.

Distributed in two editions:

Standard, for personal use, and Professional to create shareware screen savers complete of nag screens and registration keys support. Screen Saver Maker
