How could it be so obvious that not every computer user is a rookie? There are quite a number of experts using computers for years and there are many who have never used a computer at all. Now in the era of internet, most computer users are knowledgeable about computers. Folder Colorizer is a very simple and easy to use application. I think it is not a gimmick. Windows Colorizer - Free Download (Viewers Can Restore Old Color And Add New Theme To Windows 7) Folder Colorizer is a small Windows application created to assign a different color to any folder on your system. Basic technical knowledge is enough because Folder Colorizer introduces an entry in the Context Menu and thus allows you to simply right click a folder to change its color. The application already comes with eight predefined colors, but it also allows you to define your very own and even save it by writing down an unique name. It's all just a matter of clicks and while this could be very well considered just a task more appropriate for rookies, it could come in handy to every computer user out there. The application doesn't affect system performance in any way and the best of all is that it works smoothly on all Windows versions on the market. What's more, it only asks for administrator privileges in order to change the color of system-protected folders. Last but not
