(video: 0:42 min.) The new code assist feature enables users to write and edit code directly in the drawing or command window. The new code assist can interpret variable and function definitions and enable you to call functions without having to write out the arguments and return type. With Code Navigator, you can now view all the attributes in a drawing by selecting the attributes tab in the ribbon and the attributes that you've added to the drawing will be displayed. Expand Toolbar: Use the Expand Toolbar to customize the standard UI and add toolbars and buttons that extend your work. Choose from a number of different options to tailor the UI to your workflow. Ribbon command sets: Add or replace command sets, including user defined custom command sets. Use a ribbon command set to quickly access a set of frequently used commands. (video: 1:52 min.) Suppress Deleted Objects: Maintain a list of objects that have been deleted from your drawing. Easily add or remove objects from the list, and use the information to determine what objects are necessary. Make a Selection: Make a selection without opening the tool bar. Use the keyboard shortcuts to select objects and then change the selection by changing the mouse cursor. You can use the freehand tool to create both freehand and parametric curves and surfaces, including extruding, modifying, and trimming. Use freehand for more detailed control over your drawing by selecting a precise area. You can choose to create a parallel or helix curve, and the freehand tool can be used with any combination of shapes. The Arc tool is a freehand tool that creates a circular arc. Create freehand circles or arcs, polygons, and arcs with overlapping segments. You can easily edit the curve by resizing the curve, removing points, and adding or modifying control points. Use the Spline tool for freehand continuous and parametric line and curve segments.
