The present disclosure relates to an optical instrument, and more particularly, to a telescope assembly having a base, a folding body rotatably attached to the base and a pivot pin movably attached to the folding body so that the base, the folding body and the pivot pin are adapted to allow moving the folding body through three angular positions relative to the base. Telescopes are used to gather information that is typically unobtainable with the naked human eye. Telescopes are used in a variety of applications including such diverse application as: surveying the sun; military observation; aerial reconnaissance; guiding missiles and spacecraft; and astronomical observation. The most common type of telescope is a refracting telescope that uses a lens to refract light from an object onto an eyepiece. However, disadvantages of refracting telescopes include: limited viewing angles due to the refraction of light, limited magnification, and an inability to view distant objects. A second type of telescope is a reflecting telescope. A reflecting telescope uses a light collection device to gather light, and then to reflect it back to a viewer through a lens. Reflecting telescopes possess many advantages including: the ability to collect light in a full 360° angle of view; increased magnification; and the ability to view distant objects. However, disadvantages of reflecting telescopes include that they are susceptible to weather conditions, require a longer focal length than refracting telescopes, and can be expensive to produce. A third type of telescope is an imaging telescope that uses an image-forming device, typically a CCD, to gather an image of an object and then to display it on a monitor. Imaging telescopes have many advantages including: 3D viewing capability, less susceptibility to weather conditions, and relatively lower cost. However, disadvantages of imaging telescopes include that they are limited in viewing angles, 09e8f5149f

The mks_vir package contains the mks_vir program. The mks_vir is a network and local virus scanner. Scanning operations are performed on the hard drives and network devices. Virus analyzer detects virus files and compares them to the Virus List, containing signatures of viruses. Mks_vir searches for files infected with viruses, Trojan horses or worms. At the time of the search, the software catalogues the data infected files and categorises them by type. Scanner runs under the windows NT, 2000, XP, ME, 2003, Vista, 2007 and has a license for a single workstation. Scanner is an advanced software that combines the following functions: Locate virus files, analyse and delete them. Perform a real-time protection of a host against intrusion of harmful programs, quick and secure removal of detected harmful files (including fixing of boot files). Remove Internet and network parasites (Internet worms, botnets). Prevent the appearance of viruses, Trojans and worms on removable media. The Mks_vir has special features that make the software unique and superior to the similar products on the market. For example, this antivirus program is able to disinfect the computer after starting it from the installation CD or from the start-up floppy disk of mks_vir. Special scanning options may be configured using the mks_vir software. For example: Scanning can be performed only with desired drives, for example only on the drive that is not infected with viruses. Also it is possible to exclude some files. All the data that are included in the exclusion list are not scanned. Example: Scanning of only one drive is a convenient feature, in cases where the hard disk is damaged, it is possible to disconnect it from the system, then run the cleaning routine. You can use your PC safely. The mks_vir automatically updates the virus database. This way you can be sure to use this antivirus software always up-to-date. This type of service is called "Updates repository". The software stores the current virus database with antivirus signatures that are on the Internet. mks_vir online Support: Our technical support provides in-depth answers to all your questions.
