With a World Cup done and dusted, English football fans can look forward to another season of matches being played in Europe. The first match day at the 51st time of asking is when Chelsea welcome West Ham. And we will also welcome back the likes of Andros Townsend and Wijnaldum... a winning trophy team with the (what will be forever) very familiar singing of 'Jack' the Jockey... And yet... But for the first time since 1976 we are not playing at Villa Park. We have decided to move our training camp and warm ups to Baku so as to improve the quality and intensity of the summer squad and also prepare for the new way of playing for English football - the big competitions will be played over a longer period. It is therefore very likely that the first two games in that new schedule will be two teams which will never be associated with a traditional British summer. We will have be in Europe for the first time since 1976 and for the second time in three years since we have had a winter break - but we will still play between June 7 and August 5. For the first time since 2010 we have a season without a single away Premier League fixture on a Sunday. It will be exciting. We have been discussing this change of timing with the Premier League in advance and were reassured that there will be no clashes at the start or end of the season, so we can plan around it. All matches will be played over 50 or 60 minutes and there will be no break for half-time. So how would our starting 11 be if we started tomorrow? 1) Didier Drogba will slot in at centre forward, with Cristiano Ronaldo a little further forward and the new German signing, Almami Moreira also pushing forward. 2) Branislav Ivanovic will guard the back four. 3) Ashley Cole will take up position beside the ball, ready to receive. 4) Kante will be in the middle with Fabregas on his left and a newly returned Mesut Ozil on his right. 5) Huddlestone will play as one of the central midfielders alongside Wootton, the English stopper will be flanked by Nasri and Ramsey. 6) The full backs will have an extra man on each flank, with Cesar Azpilicueta defending and Townsend on the opposite wing. It was just over 30 years

Emil Ros Emil Ros (July 6, 1907 - September 13, 1979) was a Croatian architect and academic. He was born in Donja Stubica. He is best known as the father of economic geographer Darko Ros. He completed his university education in Zagreb, and was a professor at the Zagreb College of Architecture. During World War II he served as a lieutenant in the Yugoslav Army. He died in Zagreb on September 13, 1979, and was buried in Mirogoj cemetery in Zagreb. His son, Darko Ros, is considered a leading Croatian economic geographer and known among other things for his analysis of the Yugoslav economic and political situation before and after the beginning of the 1980s. It also seemed to show the reformists that he has the power to fracture the political system and turn the clock back, if he chooses, rather than accept the deal and hope for the best. And that is where things are standing now. The Sunnis of Iran may have voted for a president who pledged to "modify the nuclear agreement," not to "abrogate" it. They need to realize that this is not merely about Najafbakhsh's 13 percent or even Rouhani's "moderate" economic measures, but whether or not any resolution to the nuclear crisis has a future. If it is simply to continue on with the existing deal, then this election was merely about the extension of one of the system's last flickers. If the system is truly changing, though, than we need to hope the Sunnis get what they voted for in the leadership race. Meanwhile, the other half of the ruling system is working to ensure that Khamenei does not change his mind.
