Description of the Related Art In recent years, as the number of color printing increases and the color printing speed is increased, a need for higher resolution has also increased. In addition, a size of the photosensitive material has been increased and the photosensitive material needs to be highly sensitive. Thus, a printing method called the direct printing method, in which a print is made directly on a paper without using a photographic printing plate, is the main stream and achieves a higher resolution. On the other hand, the direct printing method requires higher energy for drying and higher productivity compared with a method in which a print is made on a photosensitive material by a photographic printing plate. Accordingly, in an
