The key will be each line beginning with the known column names (Home|Steps|Calls|Drinks|Distance), and ending with numbers or lines that might be a minus sign or colon (usually a minus) and numbers or lines with the quantities of time: minutes, and hours, days, weeks, etc. For example 12:32:00 64:98:88 3:01:20 or 10:29:23 66:16:16 3:18:48 and from this you can parse the numbers into two dates and two times in different time units. A quick search around stack overflow on "parsing a csv" will give you some ideas on how to put the data together in the right way. Output You can call it into a program that presents data a bit nicer than the above. It could spit the data out like this (just as an example): Steps
