Original Post, 7:14 am: Acrobis was a Finnish company specializing in the distribution and sale of gaming peripherals, and its assets were sold to Com2us Media who is now publishing the old Acrobis brand, and also run the GameSpy and GameSites services. The Acrobis staff is now listed on LinkedIn, which shows that the company has relocated its head office to Hong Kong. According to LinkedIn, most of the staff have been made redundant, and the job titles that have changed: Managing Director, Chief Operating Officer, Head of Sales and Marketing Director, Head of EMEA Services I'm pretty sure that these people were not all made redundant, and it's hard to imagine that they were let go, as it would be very unusual for a company with this amount of senior staff to be shutdown. The LinkedIn page also lists the new job titles for the rest of the staff, which suggests that their positions have not been abolished. My guess is that the official explanation for the restructuring is that Acrobis has been taken over by Com2us, and the job titles reflect this. Com2us has a huge presence in China, and the team behind Acrobis apparently wanted to take advantage of its expertise. It's still possible that all of the team have been made redundant, and the LinkedIn page is just the usual bluster on the part of the former employees. We'll know more when an official announcement is made.Q: Cannot find symbol variable in nested class?
