Category:BlackBerryOnly time will tell if Torii Hunter will have a successful season with the Los Angeles Angels. The free-agent outfielder has been taking physicals in Los Angeles for the past few weeks and he has been working to regain his catching skills for the first time since 2002. In order for Hunter to help the Angels this season, he must adjust to playing the outfield. His catching skills were not what they once were and the knee injury to Jered Weaver seriously hampered his offensive numbers last season. Weaver last season averaged 4.5 innings pitched, 93.1 pitches per start and a 3.31 ERA. The three-time All-Star had a total of 24 quality starts, a career high. He was basically unhittable with a 1.12 ERA in the second half. This past offseason, Weaver had arthroscopic surgery to repair and repair a torn ligament in his left knee. The surgery was a success and Weaver was considered as one of the top players to have the procedure done. He can now run and throw with ease. He will not be able to pitch any more than three innings, however, without the risk of reinjury. Weaver had two extended DL stints last year. The first one was due to a sprained left ankle in September and the second one was due to a bruised right shoulder suffered in April. "I think I am ahead of schedule," Weaver said after throwing a bullpen session for the first time since the operation. "I still don't have full range of motion back in the shoulder and I can only do it for 15 seconds." Weaver was very thankful for the success he had last season. He has the ability to push the Angels to new heights. "It's been a great season," Weaver said. "We had a big run towards the end and we had some breaks at the end. That's all you can ask for."
