I was wondering whether it might be related to the higher level of difficulty, or something else in the software, so I went ahead and installed the previous release, that I also obtained from soft2sources. This installed without any issues, and I was able to use the software as normal. It's certainly the latest version, but I can't help but feel I'm missing something. A: I think the correct link is I tried the link you provided above and it didn't work. A sequenced query protocol for electrophoresis of crude DNA from in situ hybridization of DNA target sequences in human chromosomes. A stringent sequenced query protocol for electrophoresis of the in situ hybridization products is presented, which was developed for human chromosomes with the purpose of identifying any subtle modification of chromosome structure in relation to the in situ hybridization products. Sperm chromosomes were used for the development of the protocol, which involves a sequential screening of all of the possible electrophoretic sequences of fluorescently labelled in situ hybridization products applied to a band-segmented chromosome. It was shown that the application of the protocol to the analysis of seven male and female homozygote control patients with the band-segmented, 12q, 13q, 14q, 16p, 16q, 17q, and 18q chromosomes revealed only the 7q homozygote control patient as being the most likely to have a break in the corresponding chromosome band. This patient was therefore included in a further analysis of the band-segmented chromosomes for fine structural modifications using fibre-banding techniques. Analysis of these modified bands revealed that the nature of the structural abnormality detected in the patient was a reciprocal translocation between chromosome 7 and chromosome 11. The sequenced query protocol has a wider potential application. It allows the simultaneous in situ identification of all of the chromosomal segments involved in a reciprocal translocation, a deletion, or a pericentric inversion. The government of Major-General Michael McElhinney, of Surrey, British Columbia, Canada, in 1954 permitted certain areas of Vancouver to be cultivated with cannabis. These tracts of land were not individually zoned, but instead designated "Cannabis Cultivation Areas" (CA). The first CA was established in 1945, located at 20th Avenue and Cambie Street. The original nucleus consisted of a warehouse and a half-acre plot
