Delayed puberty and progressive growth in XXY male mice. Male mice carrying the TM1Y(2)/TM1Y(2) gene pattern, which results in a transcription factor TST-1 and androgen receptor (AR) deficiency, were found to exhibit normal development of the external genitalia and normal sexual behavior up to 50 days of age. However, between 50 and 70 days of age these males were found to show a delayed development of testis descent and penis erection as well as progressive growth of the internal genitalia, but normal testicular weight. Serum levels of LH, FSH and testosterone were normal. Expression of the sex-determining region Y-box 9 gene, which is coexpressed with the androgen receptor in the testis, was also normal. Serum estradiol levels were markedly reduced and serum levels of prolactin, progesterone and estradiol were normal. These data demonstrate that the growth of the internal genitalia in XXY males is determined by the same mechanisms as in normal XX male mice.

The athletes are the stars of ESPN SportsCenter and they're the celebrities with their own reality shows. But what is so different about today's professional sports? It's how it's funded. In the old days, the money came largely from ticket sales and from taxpayer-funded arenas. Even the NFL didn't have any income from television networks until the late 1930s. Today it's all about the big dollar income and much less about the stadiums and arenas. It goes without saying that professional athletes need to earn big bucks, but the problem is, it's not about the money for them anymore. It's all about the desire to make money off of someone else. There's no doubt that some of the underpaid athletes on pro sports teams need to earn money. There are bad apples and there's a reason why people go the stands to boo, but in general, people love the athletes. They love the teams. They love the championships. But in the case of today's professional athletes, the amount of money they make is completely divorced from the passion they have for the sport. Their salaries are often so

-In t-minus 4 days, the two battleships of the Imperial Japanese Navy are going to become two carriers for the Emperor of Japan. The name of the ships is Kongo and Nagara. My name is Joseph Bessette. I am here at Naval Base San Diego. As a child in Japan, I would watch the news of Japanese armed forces on CNN. The Japanese history and culture are amazing -I mean like everything. -Did you watch Captain Planet, and Gollum on that? -Yes, I saw all of them. -I think that was the one, where he tried to eat a planet? -I want to like watch this one, from Japan. -Oh yes. -But you're not allowed to watch this because you're a little kid. -Yeah. -Well, the thing that you may not have known about is that Japan has also always been the number one producer of steel. -Yeah, we're also number one in trolleys. -Oh my goodness. -We're number one in cars, trucks, vans, and trains. -They are. -That's right. -Because of everyone wanting to get from point A to point B the easiest, but the fastest. -So you can see all of this stuff in terms of Japanese culture. If you watch this, the story is about the Emperor Goshi becoming all powerful, the Emperor Hirohito. And then, Goshi dies. I believe it was because he made a bad decision. -What? -I believe that he made a bad decision based on his friends. -His friends? -Yes. I believe he wouldn't be able to forgive his enemies, so he dies. I believe the real reason is a referendum. I believe if he was elected emperor, he would be able to decide things, based on the people's views. -I think he didn't get the general message. -Right. -By saying one thing and doing another. -Right. -I believe I can watch this when I grow up. -You're gonna be as smart as he was. -He was like -He was smart. -It was
