One of the important operations in urogynecology is Burch colposuspension. While the long-term results of the procedure have been confirmed, its effect on long-term urinary symptoms and pelvic floor muscle activity have not been evaluated. From January 1997 to December 1998, 45 patients with the diagnosis of stress urinary incontinence were surgically treated by Burch colposuspension at the Department of Urology, Ramathibodi Hospital. The patients
