I'm thinking of some of the things I think most about - the hundreds and hundreds of books I've read, some of the people I've met, a dozen languages I speak, a half-dozen others I'm learning. It all seems so hard. So great, so rich, so vast. It all seems so impossible. The poet continues. "The arch in that ancient sky / Nowhere to go but... /...toward the springs..." (8). A phrase, a poem, a stanza - some of those lines from the poet. "To, if not to come, then to be as in them; / While they do not take from me / to..." (9). Remember - remember. "My one long passion," the poet concludes (10). Here's a thought. Remember to be passionate. Remember. "Whether the fact means, or 't is all the same," the poet writes (11). "Of matters the self seeming small that sit with me / And... it changes not so much that I love
