The founder of Tesla is now reportedly working with Jeff Bezos and Mark Zuckerberg's team at Google on a new plan to establish a permanent settlement on the Red Planet. Musk claims that the most exciting part of his new idea is that it will be self-sustaining. "This is a colonization effort, not a settlement, and it is designed to be sustainable in the long run by allowing people to generate their own power," the entrepreneur told NBC News, "It wouldn't just be a monument that says 'Tesla built this.' It's more about leaving a legacy of a self-sustaining settlement." Musk has been working on this idea for about a year, as he describes it. It involves building a city on Mars with a full metro infrastructure, called the "Interplanetary Transport System," a fleet of 1,000 spaceships, and an orbital elevator to get to and from the surface of the planet. It's a concept that's been around for decades, but has always been considered something of a pipe dream. But the age of space travel is upon us, with the first private mission to Mars reaching its landing spot on Friday. SpaceX
