Jill Adeline, Mon, 25 Oct 2007 11:48:11 -0700 I can't stand it when software packages do not get updated anymore. The latest version of Thunderbird is 2.0.0b2, and the latest version of Auto Zip Attachments is 1.2.2. The current version is 1.4.4 and will expire in three days. I had to update the plugin to get it working in the latest version of Thunderbird. I also had to update Auto Zip Attachments to get it working. Both packages are really outdated. I think that if we had software development projects for every little piece of software, we would have a lot less problems with software projects. If you feel that is a bad idea, you should get together with other software developers and try to find ways to integrate your projects together. I am not a lawyer, so I would not be surprised if I get in trouble with this comment, but you should know better than to force your changes on users that don't want them. It is like sending out un-checked cars. Someone might get hurt. I recommend all software developers to get together, ask the users

Auto Zip Attachments For Thunderbird

What's New In?

Once installed, the extension activates automatically upon startup of Thunderbird. SUPPORTS TONBOID HAS CHANGES Bug fixes, Auto Zip Attachments and Support for Thunderbird 2.0b2 and later This is the first release of Auto Zip Attachments. It has been tested with Thunderbird 1.5 - 2.0b2. Here is some info about changes with Thunderbird 2.0b2, released: The compose toolbar contains a new button named "AutoZip". It contains options similar to the buttons that are available at the end of the toolbar. This is the same toolbar that appears at the bottom of the toolbar when the SmartZip is enabled. When pressing the Send button, a zipped file containing all the compressed files is created in a temp folder. When pressing the Save button the original files are replaced by the zipped file. While zipping in version 1.3 I had problems when the Thunderbird has been closed while zipping was in progress. I have fixed this bug and added a new option: "Quick access via right mouse context menu". Auto Zip Attachments comes with some sample settings for you to customize the behavior. The two main options are: "SmartZip" and "Group files". For more info about the extension, please visit my website at gladiang@emug.org If you like Auto Zip Attachments and need to contact me, you can send a mail to gladiang@emug.org Thanks, Gladiang Good work! Great that you extended the update feature from the Thunderbird release to Thunderbird development. And a good choice for the web page. Some feedback: A big improvement is the ability to compress multiple files to one zip file. This is a big change in comparison to previous versions. I was pretty surprised how quickly you have done this change and updated the previous versions. Great work! I've been using it on the beta of Thunderbird 2.0b2 for some weeks now and it's great! Just a couple of things. - The best way to use this is by putting the "toolbar buttons" into your custom toolbar by right clicking on the Thunderbird toolbar and clicking on "Customize...". - If you right click on an attachment in the folder list, and select "quick access via right mouse context menu", the button changes to the info bar and the icon changes to the new icon for the selected file. - I noticed that the "quick access via right mouse context menu" option is now global. I
