When processing a large number of multi-page documents, it is often more practical to first scan all documents and only then analyze and recognize them.

â– Use a scanning application that supports Data Recognition (OCR). OCR stands for "Optical Character Recognition", "Optical Character Recognition" or "Text Recognition". The OCR feature recognizes text scanned in a document and converts it to another format, such as Word format, for further processing. It is also possible to define OCR functions directly in the scanning application using Data Recognition.
