A: To my understanding, you have a.JAR file, it looks like a java archive. Looking at your original screenshot, as well as documentation from the software's site, it is indeed an archive. What you did next was move the archive to your android device. This is incorrect. To correctly install a java archive, you have to extract it. This can be done on the desktop computer you run the program from or from the Android Device As from Android Market, it is very easy. You can right-click on the JAR file and select the option to extract the archive. If your device is not rooted, you can also install the Android SDK Tools. With these, you can install jars on your Android device. Desktop It can be done on a desktop computer. Run the JAR file and extract the archive. Note: Just right click on it and extract the archive. Norovirus outbreak associated with prepared food and restaurant foodservice operations in Singapore: interventions conducted by local health agencies from August to October 2015. We report an outbreak of norovirus gastroenteritis (NVGE) in Singapore, from August to October 2015, where most cases were associated with restaurant foodservice operations and restaurants. No outbreak classers were detected. Our findings suggest that the outbreak was due to food contamination by norovirus. We implemented two categories of interventions to prevent norovirus transmission in restaurants: (1) enhanced cleaning procedures of the environments and utensits at the point of use, routine cleaning of surfaces, facilities and equipment, sanitation of food prep environments and careful cleaning of areas and equipment. Modification of restaurant foodservice operations and business practices. Enhancement of octavational materials. Disinfection of ood and environmental surfaces was also performed at the restaurant. We also developed a norovirus (NV) surveillance system, which enabled us to monitor the status of NV outbreak and risk of associated outbreaks in future.
