Of course, you can enjoy these perennials, as they are drought-tolerant and easy to grow, but you may have questions about them. For one, these two genera do look like they are on opposite ends of the spectrum. The geraniums are warm and greenish in color, whereas the pelargoniums are bright, and a bit more cylindrical. Then, there is the shape of the foliage. The geraniums usually have a lot of green foliage, whereas the pelargoniums have broad, cigar shaped leaves. All in all, if you are in the market for an easy-to-grow, all-around garden plant, then I would probably choose geraniums
