I was searching for this file on the internet but never found it before I saw that you posted it. After you opened your.exe I checked it in notepad but the version is clearly wrong and it has some "additions" (no sure about the exact meaning of the "additions" but it's not exactly the same version as the one you provide here). So you are behind the times, searching for the wrong file and providing the wrong file. I don't understand why you did that, even in your comment you apologize and say you will take it down. Just because you don't work for a publicly known company doesn't mean you can do stuff like that. What's that "The version is cracked" line all about? If you read my comment on your original file you know that I suggest you just use your cracked version with no changes and that the only reason I told you to take down the "fake" file was because I
