An all-new pitch engine drives gameplay with true-to-life player behaviour and emotion. The pitch engine was created from the ground up from the core pitch engine which powers all EA SPORTS™ FIFA titles. It was used to power FIFA 19 and now delivers a more immersive matchday experience. A redesigned ball physics and player movement system is used to create more realistic ball flight, carry and spin as well as to bring new types of players into the game, for example, a stronger and more powerful advanced floater. Players sprint faster and more aggressively in the final third of the pitch. The position, acceleration and movement of the player on the ball is more realistic, including improved in-the-air control, speed and shot. FIFA 22 builds on the league creator and brings new playing styles to life with the FIFA Ultimate Team™, including a limited edition Cristiano Ronaldo, who will debut in pre-season. In FIFA 22, gamers have the choice to play in the beautiful 4-4-2 diamond formation as they have always played or the new and innovative 4-2-2-2 formation which brings new attacking options to the squad. “We are delighted to introduce HyperMotion Technology, a brand new gameplay engine for FIFA 22 that we believe will bring a greater level of authenticity and unpredictability to the game,” said Domenico Scala, Producer on FIFA 22. “We've worked closely with our Head of Live Operations David Rutter and our Player Motion Capture team to ensure we fully deliver on delivering authentic player behaviour as the core pillar of FIFA 22 gameplay. “With today’s announcement, the FIFA world is more connected than ever before. With the release of an all-new Pitch Engine, HyperMotion Technology and authentic matchday atmosphere to FIFA 21, we've built a better game than ever before, with more ways for fans to enjoy the experience.” The most advanced motion capture in the history of FIFA provides for a richer football simulation with a greater degree of realism. The team at EA SPORTS looks back to when Major League Soccer owners voted to limit the number of foreign players in Major League Soccer to 13 per team. This simple policy change revolutionised the sport. Matches became more unpredictable with less experienced opponents finding it harder to play against more experienced players and this was due to a simple rule change. Sebastian Navarro, Head of FIFA Licensing
