environment within the Turkish healthcare system. This study explored nurses' experiences and perceptions regarding their work environment in the Turkish healthcare system. Data were gathered using a questionnaire that was sent to 625 nurses through the Turkish Nursing Associations. Five hundred and four valid questionnaires were returned. Results showed that the majority of the nurses perceived their work environment to be supportive. The positive experiences were linked to the availability of resources, including appropriate technology. The negative experiences were mainly linked to inadequate resources, insufficient staff, and poor training. Nurses need to be supported to improve the work environment in the workplace.
Educating nurse managers on how to better support nurses may lead to positive responses. Obstructive sleep apnoea: a major and growing healthcare burden. Obstructive sleep apnoea (OSA) is one of the most commonly encountered disorders in the clinic. It is characterized by repetitive episodes of upper airway obstruction during sleep, leading to large degrees of arterial oxygen desaturation. The most severe form of the condition is associated with the frequent arousal from sleep and the accompanying arousals themselves can be life-threatening due to resultant cardiovascular events. Due to the associated comorbidities,
