Paul Stait is responsible for the Neighborhood

Association at the Bonneville Heights housing development in Clearwater, Fla. He considers it his home — something he shares with his wife and two children — and it has been his principal source of personal and professional satisfaction for about three decades. "I never imagined I could find a home so lovely and so comfortable," says Stait, 52. "I enjoy it every day. You can't find better teachers, you can't find better neighbors, and you can't find better people on a block." Proud to Call Bonneville Heights Home Stait has been active in the Bonneville Heights neighborhood for more than 30 years, serving on the Association's board for the past 12 years. He is a fourth-generation Bonneville Heights resident and has worked for local banks and insurance companies for the past 30 years. His daughter was born there. Stait helped organize the first 2-year-old neighborhood police officers program for the region and has been president of the Southwood Homeowners

Association for the past six years. "Over the course of my career, I've grown up from being a PTA president to a neighborhood 648931e174
