Digital Camera Basics The first thing to know about taking a good photograph is not to turn up the flash. Have a clean, unobstructed horizon (see the next section) and avoid pointing the camera downward into bright sunlight. Try to take the picture with the sun in the frame. If you're using a digital camera you will be presented with several choices, but you can take your best picture by knowing the different types of shots available, and the order that they should be used. This chapter will teach you how to use and access those options.

Eric Croft Eric Croft (born 16 March 1947 in Stoke-on-Trent) is an English former football player and manager, who played as a midfielder. Career He began his career at Heston and Isleham in the East Sussex League. Croft, who left Heston in 1966, soon joined West Ham United's youth team as an amateur. At 17, he signed his first professional contract. After making two appearances in the 1967–68 season, he joined Colchester United in 1968. His time at Layer Road was not a happy one, and despite scoring against Tottenham in the FA Cup, he was named player of the season in the Colchester Community Relations Council League Team of the Year. Croft moved to Carlisle United in 1969, and made eight league appearances before returning to the south-east in 1971, where he joined Dover Athletic. Croft made two appearances during the 1971–72 season, and moved to non-league Eastbourne Town in 1972. He later played for Tunbridge Wells before retiring. He made a total of 82 league appearances for the West Ham. After retiring, he went into football management. His first managerial position was with Tunbridge Wells, where he was appointed in February 1985. He was the manager for the rest of the season, and during it they finished fifth in the National League. After leaving Tunbridge Wells in 1986, he became manager of Runneymede in 1986. He took the club to the 1988 Southern League Cup Final, which they lost 3–0 to Rushden Town. In 1987, Croft was manager of Leatherhead. He later had coaching roles at Chatham Town, Dartford and Sutton United. He was also manager of Tunbridge Wells for a third time in 1992. Croft was manager of Broadstairs Town between 1998 and 2003. During this time, the club won the Kent Invicta Cup in 1999. What's New in the?

INTRODUCTION History of Mr. Antipinus In 2006, I was on a plane bound for the Miami International Airport. Everyone on board was chatting about the previous night, which is pretty typical for an international flight. As I listened to this incident, I was struck by the similarities between the events on this plane and those in Rome some 2000 years ago. "You know they burned down the Colosseum?" "Yes, but that was at the end of the 1st Century." "Oh." I continued reading my article while resting for the next 20 minutes, and then overheard the following exchange: "The Roman Empire is the most advanced nation in history, for the past 2000 years at least." "Well it wasn't until the end of the 20th Century, and even then, the empire wasn't technically the most advanced." After a short pause, the man continued in a frustrated voice, "Well why was it that there were these barbarians attacking the Roman Empire, when it had stood the test of time for 2000 years?" "Well you see, they were attacking Rome under the command of someone named Constantine." "So you're saying it was as if the German army was attacking Germany in the late 1920's?" "No, the people who were attacking Rome in the late 20th Century, had nothing to do with Germany." "Oh, right. I get it now." This story got me thinking about the parallels between Roman society in the late 1st Century and the world today. The following 10 facts are the result of these conclusions. 1) Roman society was organized, and military might was a key part of that organization. 2) New laws were passed to direct civil and military government. The prevailing view among the general public was that the latter, military class, should have more control. 3) Citizenship for the Romans was bound tightly to military service. 4) Roman society was deeply insecure. 5) Everyone was trained to be a soldier, an official or a civil servant, with an emphasis on combative readiness. 6) The Romans believed their country was a providence – they believed the gods and their will were one and the same. 7) Christianity, based on the Greek view of God, became the dominant religion in the Roman Empire in the 2nd Century. 8) Christianity was
