My current setup is as follows Zip file with one lambda functions which can be invoked. When I invoke this zip file, I get my defined lambda function. Zip file with multiple lambda functions which will be invoked. When I invoke this zip file, I want to find the lambda function which is relevant with the zip file and run it. Problem: when I try to run multiple lambda functions in one zip file, I get a returned error. A: I would suggest following: You can invoke zip file as a lambda function which invokes your function and then makes API call to delete itself. The zip file can have multiple lambda functions in each of the zip file which will be invoked when zip is executed. If you invoke zip multiple times, you will get more than one copy of you lambda function The zip file can be written to S3 as a trigger which in turn invokes one or more lambda functions when a file is uploaded to a specific bucket. I hope this helps. I would suggest if you still need multiple lambda functions in the zip file, get rid of invoking a lambda function within the zip as well. of sex." " I'm not surprised." " It's been awhile for a lot of us." "But this will help." " Hi." " Hi, I'm Mr Smith." "It's an honour to meet you." "Mr Smith." "I have a
