A study of "satisfaction".]. Pre-tested questionnaires were completed by 195 patients at the outpatient clinic of the dental office of UMC Utrecht in the period from July to October 1990, during which time their satisfaction with the medical-dental care they had just received was assessed. A standardised questionnaire was used and its content was based on the five quality domains defined by Kilbourne and Walters. In those cases where a patient had more than one reason for dissatisfaction, or was dissatisfied with more than one aspect of the doctor/patient relationship, the quality domains were then weighted by weighting coefficients set according to the priorities of the patient and the physician. After a period of 4-6 weeks the patients were readmitted to the clinic and the answers to the same questionnaire again surveyed. A large majority of patients (88%) were moderately to very satisfied. Based on the individual weighting of the various quality domains, the single most important factor for a large majority of patients (75%) was the manner of doctor/patient relationship and this was followed b7e8fdf5c8
