Development and validation of a risk score for occult colonic obstruction in symptomatic patients. As a result of the recent availability of CT colonography, there has been an increase in the recognition of the signs and symptoms of mild or occult small-bowel obstruction. The factors associated with a higher risk of the development of severe small-bowel obstruction (≥ 7 days of symptom duration) were identified, and the risk score for the development of severe small-bowel obstruction (SSBO-RS) was constructed using these factors. The study design was a prospective cohort study. Patients underwent CT colonography for evaluation of a single, nonspecific lower abdominal or pelvic symptom. The SSBO-RS was defined as the number of risk factors present. Of the 184 patients included in the study, an SSBO-RS of ≥ 2 was observed in 43 (23.6%), and ≥ 3 was observed in 35 (19.2%). The sensitivity and specificity of an SSBO-RS of ≥ 2 , with a negative predictive value of 97%, was 76% and 88%, respectively, and with a negative predictive value of 94% with an SSBO-RS of ≥ 3 , was 80% and 92%, respectively. In this prospective cohort study, a SSBO-RS of ≥ 2 was associated with a 23% risk of severe small-bowel obstruction within 7 days. However, the risk increased with a SSBO-RS of ≥ 3 to an approximately 50% risk of an SSBO-RS of ≥ 3 . The study was conducted at a single facility, and the data were prospectively collected.
