Attendance Systems & Software Attendance Systems & Software From tracking time to identifying someone out of their shift, the attendance system should do it all. Any system can track attendance and then send an automated response to the person being out of their shift. However, the real value for a business is in what the attendance system can automate for you. Firing someone? Sending alerts when shifts are too full? Adding people to shifts from across the company? These are all things that automation makes possible with an attendance system. You get a flexible foundation and tools to build on top of that foundation. Don't wait until you need an attendance system, talk to us today about helping you plan for it. Our clients can choose from a number of attendance system solutions Do you want to see your attendance system in use? We have a great example of how our clients use their attendance system in production.

The present invention relates to illumination systems. More particularly, the present invention relates to a method and apparatus for projecting light onto a surface for imaging purposes. A conventional example of such an illumination system is an illumination system using a microlithographic stepper used in the manufacture of semiconductor integrated circuits. An existing illumination system may include various kinds of illumination optical systems. These illumination optical systems may include a light source such as a mercury lamp, light from which is divided into a first light flux, a first reflected light flux and a second reflected light flux using a first mirror, a second mirror or a half mirror, a light condensing optical system, which condenses the first, first reflected and second reflected light fluxes, a homogenizing optical system, which homogenizes the light fluxes that have passed through the light condensing optical system, a first illumination optical system, which illuminates a first illuminated surface with the homogenized light fluxes from the homogenizing optical system, a second illumination optical system, which illuminates a second illuminated surface with the homogenized light fluxes, and a reticle stage (an X-Y table), which provides relative movement between the first illuminated surface and the second illuminated surface. In this way, a pattern of the reticle stage is imaged on the first illuminated surface of the wafer using illumination light and the pattern of the reticle stage is imaged on the second illuminated surface of the wafer using illumination light. In such a conventional illumination system, the light fluxes that have been divided
