Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a fixing method for a color image, more particularly, to a method for fixing a color image formed by an image forming method, a method for image forming device thereof. 2. Discussion of the Background U.S. Pat. No. 5,227,166, hereinafter "Patent Document 1", discloses a method of heating and pressing a recording medium on which an image has been formed by an image forming method, with a heating roller and a pressing roller, in which the temperature of the recording medium is maintained, at a temperature of 200° C. or lower, and is set to be higher than that of the heating roller, to thereby form a fixing nip area for making the recording medium to pass therethrough. A fixing method according to the above-mentioned Patent Document 1, however, has a problem of a non-uniform temperature distribution in the axial direction of the heating roller.

More specifically, a fixing unit of the Patent Document 1 has a large heat capacity due to a large thermal capacity of an energy saving lamp. Accordingly, a time needed for transferring heat from the heating roller to the recording medium becomes long, which results in that, in a state that a recording medium is pinched with the nip area, the temperature of the heating roller is increased by heat transfer from the recording medium. This causes a non-uniformity in the temperature in the axial direction of the heating roller. Therefore, the fixing temperature of the recording medium varies in the axial direction of the heating roller, which causes a non-uniform image. Japanese Unexamined Patent Application Publication No. 11-329240, hereinafter "Patent Document 2", discloses a fixing unit of an image forming device in which a heating roller has a multilayer structure, which includes a center layer having a low thermal capacity and an outer layer having a high thermal capacity, to reduce an unevenness in the temperature distribution in the axial direction of the heating roller. According to the fixing unit of the Patent Document 2, heat is transferred to a recording medium via
