Notification:.Baptist pastor arrested at North Korean Embassy Stephen J. Meininger, USA TODAY | USATODAY The Rev. Bae Bok-nam was freed Monday after spending 33 days being held at the North Korean embassy in Geneva. Bok-nam was released at about 1:30 a.m. local time in East Rutherford, N.J., and was expected to return to his home in Seoul, said a pastor who helped free him. Bok-nam, an evangelical pastor from South Korea, had planned to host a special lunch for ministers from North and South Korea this week at the Seoul Embassy. "It's very exciting for me," said the Rev. Bonggi Tong-hyung, a pastor at Seoul's Asan Presbyterian Church who helped negotiate his release. "The whole effort here is that we will do what we can to improve the environment. "We all came together to say that we should give an opportunity, not only to the Rev. Bae Bok-nam, but to other people who want to minister." The South Korean government in early June said Bok-nam, 45, would be permitted to visit his family. The North Korean government released the South Korean pastor to a third country in July after he spent 77 days in prison there, according to The Associated Press. On the night of July 2, U.N. Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon, during an unscheduled briefing, said an unnamed South Korean minister was being held by North Korea and another unnamed South Korean had been "relocated" by the North. Tong-hyung told the Associated Press the South Korean minister is Bok-nam. The release of Bok-nam comes during a rare moment of openness between North Korea and South Korea. The countries recently participated in a unified Olympic team and have agreed to restore diplomatic ties. Two other South Korean Christian missionaries have been held by North Korea for more than a year. Under pressure from the United Nations and other governments, North Korea freed Hyeon Soo-hyun last month. The wife of that prisoner, Cindy Kim Hee-chul, 648931e174
