The Sea Eagle Air Display Team and the aircraft of the American Volunteer Group (Aviation) (AVG) regularly take to the skies in what is likely to become one of the most significant aviation events in the history of New Hampshire. Since its inception in 2015, the team has attracted the attention of local residents and tourists alike. The skills of the Sea Eagle Air Display Team and its crew of pilots have been on display in the past year through the Victory and Adventure Air Show (VAAS) for the annual "100 Years of Wings," held at the Hillsboro Municipal Airport. The air show came to an end last weekend, ending its 26th consecutive year of celebrating the legacy of aviation in the Granite State. The study forecasts that across the globe, snow and ice cover will decline, and temperatures will increase. The study, released Wednesday by the U.S. government, also predicts food and water shortages, billions of dollars in damage from severe storms and rising sea levels. People will have to do more to lower their greenhouse gas emissions, such as carpooling, using public transit and biking. Here in Washington, scientists from NOAA, NASA and the National Snow and Ice Data Center have predicted the Northwest will see a significantly warmer and drier summer. Sea levels could rise 5 inches in some areas. "In the Northwest, we already live with the impacts of climate change," said William Anderegg, lead author of the Washington portion of the National

Climate Assessment and a senior research scientist at the NOAA's Geophysical Fluid
