AdvertisementQ: Regex to match a field of strings in a line I am trying to match a field of strings in a line, so I want to pick "Static IP Address" by default and then user can add to it. So I tried using ".Static IP Address." and it works properly. But how should I go about picking just the "Static IP Address"? A: String regex = "[^]+Static IP Address[^]+"; Use.* (any character zero or more time) followed by Static IP Address (one or more time), followed by a literal character. See It has long been a goal of scientists and engineers to construct a multi-stage cryogenic refrigeration system. A multi-stage system typically improves the performance of cryogenic refrigerators by increasing the volume of space that can be cooled over that of the cryogenic refrigerator, by decreasing the load on the compressor and/or blower, by increasing the efficiency of the refrigeration, or some combination thereof. One type of multi-stage system that has been attempted to increase the volume of space that can be cooled is a two stage system as shown in FIG. 1. In a two stage system, a first stage operating at approximately 100K is used to cool a region of volume 1 and a second stage operating at about 4K is used to cool a region of volume 2. However, the two-stage system does not have the capacity to cool a region of volume 1 and a region of volume 2 simultaneously. For example, if there is a load applied to volume 1, then the second stage is prevented from cooling volume 2. In some multi-stage systems, multiple stages are used to provide a continuous path of cool air. For example, a first stage operating at approximately 100K is used to cool a region of volume 1, and a second stage operating at approximately 4K is used to cool a region of volume 2. A third stage operating at approximately 20K can then be used to cool region of volume 2. The third stage in the three-stage system is designated as a bypass stage, because it is not used to cool any region of volume 1. The use of a bypass stage in a multi-stage system does not improve the performance of the cryogenic refrigeration system because the bypass stage only

On trial: Kwame Awuah, pictured with Bishar Say, is accused of murdering his girlfriend's family on the same night A man who allegedly tried to sexually assault a machete-wielding man at London's Wembley Stadium on England's day of football has been found not guilty by a jury. Kwame Awuah, a visiting University of York student, was arrested after the attack, described as 'a calculated, attack'. He is accused of murdering his girlfriend's family at the same time. Awuah claimed he suffered from amnesia, because of concussion received when attacked with a knife. The 31-year-old was cleared of attempted murder after he claimed he had no recollection of what happened and had gone to the leisure centre with 'no intent to cause death or serious injury', the jury at Westminster Magistrates' Court heard on Monday. Prosecutor Matthew Golby said: 'This was a calculated attack on somebody who was not armed and it was carried out by someone who carried a machete and he was wearing a coat.' Footage of the attack, shown on the BBC, showed Awuah sexually assaulting the man in a bathroom before striking him in the head with the machete, which is believed to have been seized from the scene. The 'wounded' suspect then went on to a nearby food court, where he is alleged to have attacked another shopkeeper, injuring him. On November 25, Awuah, a finance student, went to meet his girlfriend's family at The Waterside Restaurant on London Road, Hatfield, Hertfordshire. He also arrived in a taxi at the stadium before midnight on a night when thousands of football fans were in the area. Awuah claimed he suffered amnesia, because of concussion received when attacked with a knife Prosecution lawyer James Masonson QC told the jury the older man, who was taken to St Albans City Hospital, died from a brain haemorrhage and a head injury. Mr Mason said: 'The evidence about whether he died immediately, instantly or some time later, will not be important to you because the cause of death was brain injury and that requires us to prove that he was actually deceased. 'It doesn't matter whether that happened instantaneously or over time. 'Having said that, he was alive when he went to The Waterside Restaurant
