With starting quarterback Shaun Hill set to retire, the Los Angeles Rams have begun the search for a quarterback to replace him. The best quarterbacks in this year's draft is West Virginia's Geno Smith, but there isn't a quarterback in this year's draft that would fit what the Rams need more than Smith. However, if the Rams decide to move up for Smith, there is a quarterback that could be a potential heir to Hill. Running back Todd Gurley, the first overall pick of the 2015 draft, is the quarterback for the Rams and will be starting his first NFL season this year. With no other quarterback on the roster, Smith has a chance to be the quarterback for the Rams when they move up and take him in the first round. On the other hand, if the Rams didn't move up for Smith, they could draft him in the second round and then sign a veteran quarterback like Joe Flacco, Brian Hoyer, or Case Keenum. After Smith and Gurley, there isn't a quarterback in this year's draft that can do much for the Rams. The next best quarterback is a prospect from this year's draft. Arizona State's Taylor Kelly is the best quarterback in this year's draft and would be the best quarterback for the Rams. Kelly is a dual-threat quarterback that brings the best characteristics of what the Rams are looking for in a quarterback. Though he has good
