With layers, it's possible to erase layers of one image and apply effects to the image while leaving the original image untouched. This is especially important when painting a layer and wanting to add transparency so as to create a burn effect. The layers feature is an essential part of Photoshop, so don't skimp on practicing it. The layer feature is essential to Photoshop, so don't skimp on practicing it. Creating a Raster Image in Photoshop When starting, the most important thing to remember is that Photoshop is a vector program. When creating an image in Photoshop, you are creating a vector file. Vector files are "clean" files that can be scaled infinitely, scaled without compromising picture quality. To create a raster image, you need to start with a raster file first. You can convert a raster file to a vector file within Photoshop, but it is much easier to first take a picture and save it as a JPG file as a pixel file. In Photoshop, go to the File menu and then select "New." Select the File Type you want to save your file as and then hit the "Choose" button. For a JPG file, choose "JPEG (.jpg) or "JPG (18-235)" in the file type. A JPG file is an 8-bit RGB raster format. RGB stands for Red, Green, and Blue and the "8-bit" is an 8-bit raster file that has 256 colors that can be used. It is a standard file type, so you'll be able to open it in most of the photo editors you'll find on the market. When you hit save, you are creating a new document that is based on the file you saved as. You can rename the file before saving, or create a new name if you want. Creating an Image in Photoshop Select your file type when you save the JPG file. If you don't like the way your JPG file looks, you can save it as a separate raster file in

Q: Loading a different PNG depending on the screen resolution I'm implementing a UI for editing user interfaces. All user interfaces created on the server-side are saved as PNG images at a certain resolution. Whenever a user clicks on the UI they are given the option to change the resolution of the image. When the resolution is changed, the image should be loaded from the server using a response header instead of a cookie (differentiating between the different screen resolutions). I was thinking of changing the PNG image to a WebP format, and then decoding the image using JavaScript. I'm not sure of the performance and other side effects of doing this. Can anyone shed some light on this, is this the right way of going about this? A: A binary file is just a binary file. When loaded in a browser the browser will typically decode the image at the quality requested by the browser, and not attempt to decode the image at a higher quality. So it really doesn't matter what type of image is being loaded. I wouldn't worry about the PNG->WebP conversion. Just send the user a PNG image. You can then send the appropriate res with your redirect. If you need to control the resolution of the image, you should look into CSS. It is better suited for controlling image quality.

Q: dplyr gather() with condition I'm trying to get a data set that looks like this:
date variable count
2014-01 A 1 2014-01 B 1 2014-01 C 2
2014-02 A 1 2014-02 B 3 2014-02 C 3
I'm trying to use gather() and count() to get that. So far I have:
library(dplyr) df

Q: VBA Function - Function not writing to Range I have a function written in VBA that is not working as expected. I have written a routine to check whether the Userform values are empty. If the values are not empty, then I need to write them into the cells A19:J19. Function updateRange(i As Integer, j As Integer, Answer As String) As String Dim rng As Range Set rng = Cells(19, i) If IsEmpty(Answer) = False Then rng.Value = Answer End If updateRange = rng.Value End Function By opening the Userform, the values are empty. I have left this in a Userform: Cells(2, 1).Activate Cells(2, 1) is the A19:J19 range. Can someone help? A: Try this: Function updateRange(i As Integer, j As Integer, Answer As String) As String Dim rng As Range Dim rng2 As Range Set rng = Range("A19:J19") Set rng2 = Cells(19, i) If IsEmpty(Answer) = False Then rng2.Value = Answer End If Set updateRange = rng2.Value End Function
