Beta-1,4-galactosyltransferase III (B4GALT3) is a UDP-galactose:beta-1,4-N-acetyl-D-glucosamine alpha-L-fucosyltransferase. B4GALT3, a member of the beta-1,4-galactosyltransferase family, has been cloned from a human lung cDNA library. Similar to other alpha-1,4-galactosyltransferases, B4GALT3 requires GDP-beta-L-fucose and a galactosyl acceptor (e.g., UDP-galactose) for its expression in Cos7 cells. B4GALT3 protein expressed in insect cells shares alpha-1,4-galactosyltransferase activity with a mammalian protein as evidenced by the activity in the absence of a GDP-beta-L-fucose acceptor. Enzymatic analysis of the products from UDP-galactose acceptor, beta-1,4-N-acetyl-D-glucosamine, revealed that B4GALT3 forms a beta-1,4-linkage between UDP-galactose and beta-1,4-N-acetyl-D-glucosamine. These results suggest that B4GALT3

In this code when the user presses the button, it should load the view in the button click. - (IBAction)btn_Clicked:(id)sender { SecondViewController *ivc = [[SecondViewController alloc] init]; [self.navigationController pushViewController:ivc animated:YES]; } A: Yes by default button will not show its underline when clicked, I think you are over thinking here, the underline in your button is a visual indicator that you can tap it, just like a button, if you tap on the button you will see your button is clicked. Here is a way you can, using [UIButton buttonWithType:UIButtonTypeCustom]; Assuming that you have a button with default blue background, like UIButton *btn = [UIButton buttonWithType:UIButtonTypeCustom]; btn.frame = CGRectMake(50, 20, 100, 50); [btn setBackgroundColor:[UIColor blueColor]]; create 2 customView for it UIImageView *imageView = [[UIImageView
