list of products. Each item in the list has a toggle button above it. Using React's createElement, I can add a class to it: let newItem = React.createElement(Item, { name: 'Company Name', toggle: }) However, I need to add this class to many items (hundreds) in the list. I can't just createElement multiple times in the loop or I get the 'toggler is not defined' warning (since it's a class. I could just name it but this is not the most ideal solution). Here's the loop that I have so far: for (const company of companies) { let newItem = React.createElement(Item, { name: company.name, toggle: }) this.props.appendData(newItem) }

Is there a simple solution to this problem? Preferably I'd like to keep each Item as a React component. A: I would consider wrapping them into a component for which you can define all properties required inside it and pass it as the children of that component. It will also be a child of the current component. Something like below: function App() { return ({this.props.companies.map(company => ( ))}); } function Company(props) { return ({props.company.name}); } Hope this helps! Hello, Tana. I will be out of the office tomorrow, but they are expecting me back by Monday b7e8fdf5c8

As this software comes without any hard drive footprint, you don't have to worry about the installation process. In fact, it is one of the reasons why it is regarded as a lightweight application, since it does not require any additional drivers to run. As you can see on the screenshot above, this portable application comes with a graphically-enhanced interface that makes it easy to perform regular translations; you don't need to go through a lengthy procedure to launch this tool. From the get-go, you have the option to choose the language you want to type the text in. This can be done in a couple of ways: either by choosing from a pre-defined list of languages, or by typing the text in any language supported by the tool. In the first case, you can choose any language from the list that shows up after you type the text you want to translate. If you want to type in a different language, you will need to type the text directly into the primary panel, which allows you to quickly input text into this application. Once you get the text in, just make sure that you press the Enter key. Note that you have the option to do things manually, or use autofill shortcuts to fill up the fields for you. There are several autofill shortcuts that allow you to fill out data directly from your clipboard content. Apart from that, you can also use an autofill button to send data to any of the fields automatically. On the main panel of the application, you'll see a blue text box, which will display the translated text. Depending on the string of text you've entered, you'll see two simple buttons. The first one is labeled "Ok", which allows you to hit the Enter key to generate the translation. The second button is labeled with the phonetic symbols and the corresponding sound. Once you press that button, you'll be able to hear the corresponding sound effect. However, if you want to hear the sound in a different language, you need to click on the blue text box, scroll up until you find the language, and click on the button that corresponds to the required language. The screen also shows the phonetic alphabet along with its corresponding transliteration. One of the great things about this tool is that it supports multiple languages. In addition, you can also change the language by clicking on the dropdown menu
