Q: Why can't I access my directory using 'php test.php' Apologies in advance if the terminology is bad or I'm missing something stupid obvious. I'm trying to learn php. I want to write a website that uses a localhost, but can access a directory in my site folder. I'm just trying to simply display a page, not actually write to the file or use any of the other functions in php. Here's what I've done so far index.html Test index.php test.php But when I run test.php from the root directory of my site, it echoes Hello world! Why is this? I want it to echo Hello world! in a folder. A: The current directory is taken into account when executing PHP scripts. So if you have a directory : /home/mysite/my_files/ And you execute : /home/mysite/my_files/test.php PHP finds the script and executes it in /home/mysite/my_files/ If you want to execute it in /home/mysite/my _files/, you need to use: /home/mysite/ my_files/index.php So you'll have : index.php Test
