Q: SQLite Oracle replication via JDBC We are going to setup replication between two databases (SQLite and Oracle). We have an application that execute SQL and insert data into the target database (Oracle). I have found the Oracle JDBC API that allow replication using the Oracle JDBC driver. Our application is already using the SQLite JDBC driver to connect to the SQLite database and insert or update data into the target database (SQLite). Is there a driver to Oracle that is compatible with the SQLite JDBC driver? EDIT : I am reading the Oracle's documentation but I couldnt find anything regarding replication. A: I couldnt find anything regarding replication. It doesn't matter what the documentation says. You don't talk to Oracle using a JDBC connection. You talk to it using its SQL*Plus interface, or JDBC interface, or PL/SQL interface, or its own Admin (RMAN), or whatever you want. out that her husband, Christopher had been beating her for years. Naturally, I was disgusted and horrified, but at the same time, I couldn't believe it. He was an extremely intelligent man, and successful on many levels. It baffled me that he could be so evil. I couldn't understand it. I told her I was going to call the police and take care of the situation. She said she would be proud of me. She let me go, and she called their counselor at the time to meet her at the trailer. When they met, she told him the truth. The counselor said Chris would have to be removed from the home. This was devastating to her; she didn't want to have her kids taken away from her. She told the counselor her story, but he didn't believe her. He told her that she needed to get her kids back to see if she could convince them to get him help. The only way she could do that was to tell her kids that Chris was in jail. She did this, and she was unsuccessful in her attempt to get Chris help. She called me because she knew her story would sound unbelievable, and she wanted someone she could trust to tell the truth. As for her, she was emotionally bankrupted. She did what she could in what was left of her mind, and she told Chris that his "inappropriate actions were hurting her" ♦

CAMP PENDLETON, CA – Over 20 million Americans live with Disabilities, making it the biggest number. One disabled veteran said he's taking part in the Paralympics in London to show the world what can be done, even if he has to break the world record. "The Paralympic Games is an opportunity to show the world what people with disabilities can do and to have it recognized and for the disabled to have the same chance as the able-bodied," said Damien Winch, who suffers from Multiple Sclerosis, Cerebral Palsy and Osteogenesis Imperfecta. Winch has competed in the Paralympics for seven consecutive years. He now specializes in multi-functional sport including wheelchair football. During the 2012 London games, he broke a world record for goal-kicking while he was suspended in mid-air. "That was pretty amazing," Winch said. "After I got done I was pretty shocked. I was so happy and it's nice to know that I can do something I've never done before." Winch said people with disabilities should not be invisible. "I think it's really important for the world to recognize that we are here and we are worthy." This year's games are being held in Glasgow, Scotland. Winch and his team are focusing on not only breaking world records, but he's making sure his disabled athletes get the support they need. "We train seven times a week, we do physical therapy from a couple of different people and we also have a physio to help us on the field." As a Special Forces soldier, Winch said he has been given the opportunity to overcome obstacles. "I've worked so hard to get here, I don't think I'd be where I am now, if I didn't push through the hard times." The 20th Paralympic Games will be held Aug. 29 through Sept. 9 in London. I think 'Downtown' is a cocktail that needs to be made when the nights are short and the air is cold and yes...it was made 'pink' by accident.
