I have been working on an application I built, and along the way I have made several pull requests to the project repository. Each time I do this, the pull request looks good, but the project owner rejects my pull request, saying I need to fix an error in my pull request, which I have absolutely no idea how to do. I can understand why my pull requests are rejected, but I don't see how I can go back and fix this error. My suspicion is that I am missing something in my code, but I can't find what I'm missing. This leads me to believe that I probably deleted the branch, and haven't actually made a pull request to the project. My branches are color coded, and I don't see a branch that indicates that I have made a pull request. Here is the error message that my project owner sent me: Your code appears to be missing the following changes: 1cdb36666d

Recently, this poster has been making the rounds online and it's looking like it's going to be a pretty good one. In the poster, you can see Pikachu alongside a potential Pokémon Sun and Moon logo for the main series of games. It's looking pretty crisp, and the colors match up with the existing color scheme of Pokémon Sun and Moon. If this is the right poster, then it's a step in the right direction for Pokémon Sun and Moon. It's exciting because it features Pokémon and a potential logo for the Pokémon Sun and Moon release. It's also just in time as the games are only a few months away. Are you excited for the poster, and do you have your hopes high for the poster's real significance?
