How to use opencv functions in matlab/octave? A: Matlab has a wrapper for the OpenCV library, which is used for interfacing with OpenCV functions. The library is available in the OPENCV library, and you can call the wrapped functions through the mex function. For example, to create a Gaussian filter in opencv, you could do the following in octave: octave:31> f = @(x,y) x.*exp(-x.^2 - y.^2); octave:33> c = @(
