In a retrospective study we evaluated the efficacy of amiodarone in patients with multiple recurrences of ventricular tachycardia and fibrillation. Among 41 patients, 16 were male and 25 were female with a mean age of 47 +/- 13.5 years. Amiodarone treatment was effective for 25 patients (61%), ineffective for 12 patients (29%), and unknown for 4 patients. This efficacy was reached earlier in patients with arrhythmogenic right ventricular dysplasia (ARVD) than in those without ARVD (18.1 +/- 4.8 vs 24.8 +/- 13.3 months, p less than 0.01). This efficacy rate in patients with ARVD was higher than that in patients without ARVD (77 vs 52%, p less than 0.05). In the arrhythmogenic right ventricular dysplasia (ARVD) group, the efficacy rate was lower in patients without than with ARVD (38 vs 90%, p less than 0.05).
