I have a table in sql with the following columns: primary_id some_column some_other_column The primary_id is set to int and should be defined as a foreign key to a table. At the moment a foreign key column called foreing_id is defined with a null value and set as default value. But it is obviously possible to delete all entries for this column and reinsert the entries. When this happens foreign_id will be null. Is it possible to define this column as default value to 0 (zero) when it is not set explicitly? Thank you in advance A: Try it: CREATE TABLE #tbl(id int not null primary key, name varchar(50) not null, foreign_id int NULL default 0); -- insert sample data: INSERT INTO #tbl(id, name, foreign_id) VALUES (1,'stack', 100), (2, 'overflow', 101); -- verify after insert: SELECT * FROM #tbl; CCUGG-3' miR-375
