Adobe Photoshop Elements 8 software is free to download from the Adobe website. You can download it either as a standalone product or as part of a full Photoshop (if you already have Photoshop then just download the 'Elements.Runtime.CD' or 'Core.CD' package). I'm going to show you here how to add effects and edit and enhance photos. The Photoshop Elements Photo Gallery is a unique tool you can use to organize and share your photos. It can be accessed in either the Edit or Organize modules. The Gallery showcases your photos in a simple and easy to use way. You can search by popular tags, tags you've created, and tags you've chosen from your hard disk. Import Photos into Photoshop Elements The first thing you will need to do is to import some photos into your computer. Adobe Photoshop Elements is a great place to showcase your best work. However, if you just want to get some new ideas, you might want to start with the 'Explore Photos' tool. 1 Plug in the memory card of your digital camera. If it is not yet inserted, plug it in now. 2 Open the 'Explore Photos' tool by choosing View > Photo Gallery or by clicking on the small camera icon on the Navigation bar or on the main menu bar. You will be prompted to select photos from your camera. There will be several options to choose from. 3 Click on a photo to take it out of the thumbnail grid. If you want to select more than one photo, hold down your Ctrl button (keyboard shortcut: "Windows" button on the Mac). 4 Click on 'Open RAW file' to bring up the RAW file. Make sure that you are not using a VXF and that the RAW file extension is not replaced by an AVI extension when the photo is shown. It is also important that the RAW file is on the root folder of the memory card. You can also move the RAW file to a different folder. 5 You can now copy the RAW file. To do this you just need to click on the Edit menu. Choose Copy as you usually would. If you choose the Open dialog option, you can select the folder where you want to store the image. 6 Note that you can also click on the red X to remove the image from the list. Top Obama adviser Valerie Jarrett on Friday urged patience in the face of what her office described as a “skeptical” media and Congress as the administration looks to kill the “Train Wreck” health care reform bill. “I think in a case like this, it is a little difficult to just come out and say we’re going to pull the train,” Ms. Jarrett, the White House’s chief of staff and senior adviser, said on CNN’s “Fareed Zakaria GPS.” “Congress is going to have to change the Senate rule, and the train is going to have to go in the right direction.” Ms. Jarrett said the train is the larger, financial and economic aspects of health care reform, but the public is more focused on quality of care. “The public is aware of the financial problems. The public is aware of the enormous amount of money the health care industry is going to have to spend on reforming the industry,” Ms. Jarrett said. “But they are not aware of some of the problems we’re going to have to fix for the quality of the care that they’re going to have.” She said the train did not have to stop and that the administration was not going to decide to pull back on its proposal. “What we’re going to do is we’re going to wait for Congress to change the rules of the Senate,” she said. “Then we’ll have an opportunity to get this through the whole process. We’re not going to quit while we’re ahead.”

Democratic Sens. Max Baucus of Montana and Olympia Snowe of Maine — who were pushing for a vote on a “skinny bill” — announced late Thursday that they would not be bringing up such a bill. A Senate Democratic leadership source told The Washington Times that no vote will be called without bipartisan support. “I don’t think she’s saying don’t fight it. I think she’s saying, wait for the Senate to amend the Senate rule,” former GOP Rep. Tom Davis said of Ms. Jarrett’s comments on CNN. On Thursday, the House voted to pass a bill that came out of the Energy and Commerce Committee, with no Republican support.

What's New In?

Q: How do I get away from the libraries For some inexplicable reason or another the libraries at work keep coming back. I have run my code through the code integrity checker, no problems there, but it keeps flagging stuff up for the next build. I am wondering how I can prevent this, I have tried going through the three t's, but to no avail, it seems to think I am calling functions such as: XcsP_GetItemTitle.
