Airwest Flight 49 Marine Airwest Flight 49 was a scheduled flight between St. Louis, Missouri and Las Vegas, Nevada. It took off on January 3, 1960. Flight 49 crashed into the Rio Grande River on March 16, 1960, killing all six people on board. Aircraft The Douglas DC-3 was operating under 14 CFR 91.207, "Crew size not to exceed 4". It departed St. Louis at 8:22 AM. Accident The aircraft crashed into the Rio Grande river on a local flight from the St. Louis Municipal Airport to Las Vegas. It was a clear sunny day with visibility of 10-20 miles and winds between. The flaps of the DC-3 were set on 25 degrees. The captain reported a large amount of smoke and an oil leak that was pouring down the left side of the fuselage. The aircraft came to a stop and was listing to the left side. It was soon discovered that the fire had spread to the center fuel tank. The aircraft was on fire for several hours and ultimately sank. The crash occurred at 10:46 AM. Aftermath None of the six crew members survived. The United States Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) investigation of the cause of the crash concluded that the evidence did not establish that the fire was caused by negligence on the part of the company or its pilot, although the CAB's investigation "reported considerable evidence that the airplane was on fire, that an attempt was made to extinguish the fire and that many shots were fired into the fuselage." The investigation also revealed that the aircraft's maintenance records showed that the engine was overhauled on September 26, 1958, the exhaust system was inspected on February 2, 1959, and the various batteries were changed by an aircraft mechanic on February 25, 1959.
