Ashampoo Cover Studio is an advanced software solution that allows users to design and print covers for CDs and DVDs, Blu-ray cases and booklets. Furthermore, one can always turn to this app to fully take advantage of their LightScribe burner to directly label a certain disc after they have finished the design process. Although this may sound a little complicated, the software's interface is very user-friendly and easy to understand. The entire designing process has been developed as a wizard, so the user is guided through each step so that nothing can go wrong: first of all, the cover format and the content need to be specified. Those who do not want to start a drawing from scratch can choose one of the built-in templates, thus reducing the whole process to just a matter of mouse clicks. All one needs to do next is to configure the customizable elements and enter the text and, if one wishes, to replace the background photos. Moreover, Ashampoo Cover Studio does not require a lot of computer resources, therefore almost any computer that is capable of running Windows can support this program as well. One may also need an active Internet connection in order to take full advantage of the dedicated tools meant to facilitate image downloading or finding relevant pictures on the web. The first value of this list is always an int. I want to be able to add some function to this value regardless of the value of this first element. So xydata=[1,2,3] would be added to as yadata = [lambda x: x*2, lambda x: x*3, lambda x: x*1] and if I changed it to xydata=[1,2,3,4] the function would be added to the new yadata = [lambda x: x*3+4, lambda x: x*2+1, lambda x: x*1+2]. I could manually write an if statement like if xydata==[1,2,3]: but I want to avoid that. This must have been asked a million times but I have no idea how to solve this. This has to be fairly straightforward but I can't figure it out. Help appreciated, thanks A: You should be able to do this simply using sum: yadata = [sum(list, i) for list, i in zip(xydata, [2, 3, 1])] A: You can use itertools.chain to build a tuple of functions that will act on your list. Then use functools.partial to pass the list to each function. import functools from itertools import chain f = functools.partial(sum, lambda x: x * 2) g = functools.partial(sum
