Vegan Cheesecake with Fresh Blueberries Turn on your JavaScript to view content This post contains a few affiliate links. This means that, at no extra cost to you, I receive a small commission (at no extra cost to you) when you make a purchase. I've made a lot of different types of vegan cheesecakes over the years, in various flavors, but one of my personal favorites is always this Blueberry Cheesecake recipe. Always simple to make, always delicious, the Blueberry Cheesecake has always been one of my favorites. I love the combination of tangy, soft cheesecake mixed with the sweet fresh blueberries. The blueberries get juiced up in this cake, so it has a lovely burst of vibrant color. It's what makes this cake extra special. It also adds a wonderful texture contrast that you don't get with a traditional cheesecake. The tart, fresh flavor of the blueberries really cuts through and contrasts with the sweetness of the cheesecake. However, if you're a fan of a more traditional cheesecake flavor, you can always replace the blueberries with other berries, or even pineapple instead. I always like to bake this in a springform pan that you can then lift off of the counter to serve. Make sure you bake this for the full time if that's what you prefer. Directions: 1. In a food processor, place the soy creamer, water, agave, vanilla and lemon juice. Pulse until well combined and creamy. 2. Pour the soy creamer mix into a bowl with the cashews. 3. Add the dates, oats and salt. 4. With an immersion blender, blend until it becomes a cream cheese mix, but doesn't have a very long, smooth consistency. 5. Line a springform pan with wax paper and pour in the mix, smoothing out so that the bottom of the pan is slightly coated. 6. Place the springform pan in the freezer for at least 1 hour or for up to 4 hours. This will help to set the crust a bit. 7. In a separate food processor, blend the coconut oil, maple syrup, and lemon juice until smooth. It should be like a thick frosting. 8. Using a spoon, spread the coconut oil mixture over the bottom of the
