Apolipoprotein(a) [apo(a)] is a polymorphic glycoprotein whose interaction with leukocyte CD163 is essential for its clearance from the circulation. Soluble CD163 (sCD163) is a soluble form of leukocyte CD163 that was previously thought to be merely a marker of leukocyte activation. The source of sCD163 is now recognized to be the liver. When measured in plasma, sCD163 is elevated in patients with cardiovascular disease; in an experimental animal model, sCD163 correlated with elevated lipid burden. Because of the latter finding, sCD163 has been proposed as a promising future biomarker for coronary artery disease and its sequelae, acute coronary syndromes, or heart failure. Access Engine, Visual Basic.On stage for their second year in a row, the Connecticut College production of "Plays for Pleasure" shared the spotlight with "A Place on Earth," a production of the New York Musical Theatre Festival. Directed by Helen M.H. Mason, the all-female cast of the plays performed at the Alice G. Pokorny Theatre in New London on November 19, 20, and 22. "Plays for Pleasure" was originally performed on Connecticut College's campus in 1980. Mason hopes the current production will draw on the production's success by promoting not only the students, but the faculty as well. "I think we still have a lot to learn from 'Plays for Pleasure' because the playwright, Amy Beaumont, was a colleague of mine at Connecticut College," Mason said. "She was a professor there for many years and then she became a playwright, and she was just in her early 30s. At the time, she was talking about the women's movement and feminism and women's rights. She had a lot of passion about these things. 'Plays for Pleasure' is about the power of theater and how, in this case, women working together was a way of bringing about change." The playwright wrote the stories
