A Roblox Premium service called Planet Roblox, was introduced on June 15th, 2017 and replaced the ability to purchase energy with Robux for future development. It offers a premium membership, an in-app shop that contains content that can be used to make in-game items, and a world pool. World pool offers up to $2,000 in prizes every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday for in-game events. Players can gain the different tiers of Robux by completing challenges in games. For the month of June 2017, the store was free to use and players had no limits on how much content they could purchase with their Robux. You've watched the lore of the LEGO video games with a heavy focus on new content. The same formula is applied to LEGO Dimensions. If that weren't enough, each team can be represented with their own minifigures. The game includes a ton of fun from hiding entire city models behind lego pieces, to mixing up villains with a similarly silly story behind them. While most of the minifigures don't blend with the team colors, there are some fun exceptions. The set includes everything you see here, plus a couple of exclusive minifigures, more than a dozen weapons and vehicles, and a few items. The set comes with a special minifigures designed to fit nicely with the roster of minifigures from the movie. The set comes with a special 4-sided mini-figurine that features a rocking-chair-looking figure as the seat. The minifigures include three playable figures from the movie as well as two minifig
